4. Teaching/Learning and Assessment Strategy Curriculum:

Fashion Styling & Creative Direction • October Intake

Art Direction

Students develop skills and techniques related to video editing and motion graphic design, taking advantage of the latest digital communication techniques to represent and present individual creative ideas.

Students conduct text-based and iconographic research (for video) via subjects related to fashion, customs and traditions, and modern society. In this unit students work with video editing and motion graphic software to create videos and visual material, for the production of effective, innovative and strategic communication strategies.

Students will also investigate the role of art direction in fashion media, and learn how to demonstrate their expertise in narrative techniques used in fashion journalism, preparing a 'package' consisting of articles, reviews, investigative reports, and press releases, for online and offline media and subsequently strategic rollout.

Layout Techniques

This theoretical and practical subject will introduce students to the graphic tools necessary to create a paper, a magazine, an online publication or any other possible publishing project; they will acquire the technical and creative skills of layout, typography and post-production necessary to define the visual identity of a fashion magazine.

The knowledge acquired in these lessons will make possible an understanding of the use of graphics in the fashion world, publishing and communication in general and can therefore be of support in all the projects of the student's academic or professional career.

Visual Research

The subject develops a deeper understanding of the professional and creative process involved in the styling field, through visual research and image analysis with the purpose of achieving creative results. The course will begin on creative and visual research, which will constitute the starting point for the definition of the identity of a printed publishing project. In addition to this creative development, the student will engage in several projects for photo-shoots, consistent with the initial research and with the themes of contemporary trends, which will constitute content for the magazine itself.

History and Criticism of Contemporary Design

The course takes a detailed look at the history of 20th century and contemporary Design – while also addressing some of the problems with 20th-century and contemporary design, interpreted using a transversal approach. The starting point is a selection of key words that sum up some of the expressive terms, such as colour, shape or mark, freely reinterpreted in the light of different artists and problems that are characteristic of Contemporary Design.

History of Photography and Photographic Techniques

By looking at the history of photography and the main photographic techniques - students uncover and explore the editorial functions, tools and practices – also learning how the history of photography has evolved from traditional to digital, as well as the evolution and the development of content development creation.

Communication Strategies

Students will research and then propose a digital and social communication strategy for an independent magazine. The application of the theories learned and the research carried out will support the proposal, documented in a written text and supported by an oral presentation.

The written proposal will highlight the interpretation of the collected information, the validity of the ideas and the value of the work done; it will be a proposal that responds to the current demands of the fashion publishing industry to attract new readers. Furthermore, the Interdisciplinary project will teach how to build creative and professional relationships and collaborations with other professionals in the sector and to create synergies between communication and retail.

Corporate Identity

The subject will provide students an introduction to marketing, digital marketing and branding. Theoretical studies of marketing and branding will provide awareness of the meaning of identity in the contemporary fashion market and contextualize how brands and publishing companies work and respond to innovation, demands and changes in the market. At the end of the course, students will research and then propose a new visual brand identity for a specific market segment.

Programme Teaching methods:

The programme is designed to facilitate the development of a student who will be highly employable and will allow them to investigate and develop their strengths.

The programme will present students with a variety of approaches to learning and assessment strategies that will promote intellectual, imaginative, analytical and critical judgement.

It will allow students to develop understanding as well as their presentation and communication skills, which they will be able to demonstrate in a variety of forms.

A combination of different learning and teaching methodologies are employed in order to promote reflective learning and develop generic transferable skills.

Methods include:

- projects to encourage independent learning through investigation, enquiry and problem solving;
- group project to enhance interpersonal and collaborative skills;
- tutorials and group tutorials to facilitate shared experiences and best practice;
- seminars, formal lectures and workshops;
- study, trips, external projects and competitions present the students with another dimension to their learning experience;
- guest speakers provide the students with a full, broader and real perspective to their specialist field of study.

Students will have the opportunity to demonstrate their achievement of the intended learning outcomes through a variety of tests appropriate to their field of study.

Course Specific Assessment Criteria:

The methods of assessment used give breadth and depth, which allow for both the formative and summative assessment of every student at each stage of the programme.

Assessment methods to support learning:

the programme uses a balanced assessment system, both summative and formative as an integral part of gathering information on student learning. Different forms of assessment can, and where appropriate should, be used to test different types of skills and learning.

Formative Assessment:

Formative Assessment informs both teachers and students about student understanding at a point when timely adjustments can be made. In formative assessment students could be involved in the assessment process. These formative assessment situations will also give students an opportunity to learn to critique the work of others. Some of the instructional strategies that will be used formatively include the following:

- criteria and goal setting: asking students to participate in establishing what should be included in criteria for success;
- self and peer assessment: With peer evaluation, students see each other as resources for understanding and checking for quality work against previously established criteria;
- student record keeping: helps students better understand their own learning as evidenced by their classroom work. This process of students keeping ongoing records of their work not only engages students, it also helps them, beyond a "grade," to see where they started and the progress they are making toward the learning goal.

Summative Assessments:

These Assessments are a means of gauging student learning, at a particular point in time, relative to established marking criteria.

Summative Assessments can occur during as well as at the end of each unit and concentrate on specific evidence of student work, examples as follows:

Portfolio Assessment is used to assess a variety of projects that have been developed throughout the unit.

Practical Coursework allows the students to demonstrate their understanding and application of practical areas of study.

Written Reports are required in some study areas, where a clear and structured brief is provided and the students are asked to submit work to be marked independently and anonymously by staff.

Formal Examinations are required in some study areas

Presentations are used in some subjects to allow the student to develop their professional communication and presentation skills. Student Projects are used when the student is required to submit work to be marked independently and anonymously.

- Issues will be taken to Programme Reflective Meetings and added to the Annual Academic Monitoring Report;
- Formal Student Representation;
- Semester/Term Questionnaire;
- Resources Questionnaire (at the end of each academic year);
- Final Questionnaire (at the end of a study cycle);
- NPS (Net Promoter Score) Questionnaire (at the end of each academic year).

It would be desirable that students provide details of their identity when giving constructive feedback on the course and teaching methods. There might be occasions when that is not appropriate and Istituto Marangoni recognises such exceptions. In these instances, the programme teams and central support services will ensure that anonymity and confidentiality are respected.

In order to 'close the feedback loop' and to communicate any improvements resulting from participants attendance, at least once in the academic year, programme teams relate back to participants the actions taken in response to their views.

Participants will be asked to answer to a series of questions, for example, if it was clear what they were meant to be learning on the programme, if the teaching had helped them learn effectively and if they have developed new skills or improved the existing ones. The data will be analysed and the Programme Leader will be required to comment on:

- key strengths and issues arising from student performance;
- key strengths and issues arising from student feedback.
